How Crates for Ukraine May Become Seeds for Church Planting

by Jamie Dean, OPC Communications Coordinator

Not long after Russia invaded Ukraine last year, an American missionary living in the former Soviet state found himself consulting a crisis manual published in the Dominican Republic.

It wasn't what MTW missionary Doug Shepherd expected to be doing last spring, but the sudden war left Ukrainian pastors scrambling for the best way to respond to circumstances they'd never faced before.

Shepherd skipped the manual's chapter on how to form a police force, but he found another section particularly helpful: how to form a crisis team.

What he learned helped the MTW team devise plans for assisting refugees fleeing their homes and organizing tangible aid for those staying behind. That effort eventually led to the project called Crates for Ukraine—an opportunity for PCA, OPC, and other congregations in the United States to pack sturdy boxes (or "crates") of much-needed supplies for shipment to the MTW team in Ukraine.

This year's winter edition of Crates for Ukraine brought in more than 1,300 crates full of medical, hygienic, and other basic supplies that are difficult to obtain or purchase in Ukraine.

Each crate includes the L'viv church's name, address, and website, along with the web address for their Reformed publishing house, with many resources available online for free, including Bible study materials. It also includes a sticker with Isaiah 41:10: "Fear not, for I am with you..." Though the crisis team can't meet every person who benefits from items in all the crates, Doug Shepherd says the church's contact information serves as breadcrumbs for those who might want to find them later. It might also serve as seeds.

Even during a war, Hacquebord is thinking about church planting, and says he's hopeful the crates project will provide many contacts for people in other parts of the country and lay groundwork for potential church plants. Ruslan, the leader of the crisis team, says he often hears from people who have benefited from aid and want to say thanks, including many who need to hear the gospel.

UPDATES

Turkey Earthquake Fund Update—

OPC Disaster Response continues to explore options to partner with other like-minded ministries in the region as we wait to hear from those in the area regarding their needs. To date we've collected $139,254.52 in generous donations. Thanks to all those who have given! The fund continues to be open to accept donations. Please continue to pray for the efforts of Reformed pastors and missionaries in the region.

Measuring Success: Sheds of Hope in Neon—

To date, 17 "Sheds of Hope" have been distributed and assembled in this Spring effort to shelter the few possessions that flood victims were able to save. With each shed, Mike and other volunteers are sure to pray and introduce Neon Reformed OPC for future contact before departing. Mike and company have also helped to add shrubs and flowers in town in an effort to bring new life where there was once only inches of sloppy mud. Slowly the town is beginning to look alive again. And there are still several weeks left in this effort!

Tornadoes Strike the South and Midwest—

We are happy to report, after checking with the OPC Presbyteries in the affected regions, there are no known needs after the recent storms and tornadoes hit in the midwest and southern U.S. Please join us in praising the Lord for the loving protection shown to His church and pray for those of whom were affected.
